

NEW YORK LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)
It has remained for Frederick L. Davenport, who was Progressive candidate for governor of New York in 1914, to tell a convincing story of the impression made by Gov. Hughes on the stump. This he does in the Outlook. Mr. Davenport says that although not himself exactly a friendly Indian at first, he was completely won over. He declares that the myth, so cleverly created and circulated by the Democrats, that Mr. Hughes is a cold, unapproachable citizen, was completely dispelled, and cites various instances to prove his assertion. He quotes the old fellow at San Diego who, after studying Mr. and Mrs. Hughes for a time, remarked "They are common, ain't they, just like the rest of us." He tells of the incident of the Detroit baseball grounds where Mr. Hughes not only showed himself to be somewhat of a fan but where he leaped over the railing to let the players shake hands with him, and where Mr. Davenport heard a man remark, "By golly there's nothing cold about him! He's a modest man, but he's all right." Davenport tells of Mr. Hughes going down into a mine at Butte, shaking hands with the miners; handling a drill, just to find out how it is done, etc., and of the impression he made, always that of a modest man but of a real man with red blood in his veins along with a reasonable proportion of the milk for human kindness. Mr. Hughes has, according to Mr. Davenport, "a winning smile and an exuberance of human interest in the presence of the people. He looks like a President, that is, like a born leader of democracy." Thus another Democratic myth goes glimmering.

Democrats Desperate.

Formal announcement that William Jennings Bryan will take the stump for Woodrow Wilson is generally regarded in the east as indicating that, since the Maine election, Mr. Wilson's managers—and Mr. Wilson is very largely his own manager—have become desperate. It seems to be another case of Mr. Wilson's having changed his mind. Ever since Mr. Bryan retired from the cabinet it has been the policy of Mr. Wilson and his supporters to lay at Mr. Bryan's door, in so far as they could, responsibility for the numerous breaks and blunders in Mr. Wilson's foreign policy. Mr. Bryan, it was asserted, was responsible for the policy of stripping the diplomatic service of competent men to make place for "deserving Democrats." It is true Mr. Bryan wrote the "deserving Democrats" letter, although it has been shown that Mr. Vick, one of the chief beneficiaries of that policy, was Mr. Wilson's own political henchman and supporter. Mr. Bryan, it was charged, was responsible for tipping off the Austrian Ambassador that the "strict accountability" note to Germany was "not to be taken too seriously." It is true, of course, that Mr. Bryan denied this on the lecture platform and asserted that he acted strictly under Mr. Wilson's orders, that he reported immediately to Mr. Wilson what he had said to Baron Duma and that Mr. Wilson approved. Mr. Bryan, it has been explained, was responsible for the folly whereby this administration closed to Americans "the open door in China." Most of the efforts to unload responsibility on Mr. Bryan have proved unwarranted; nevertheless, it has been the Wilson policy to make Mr. Bryan the goat, and the decision to utilize Mr. Bryan's services on the stump now is regarded by some of Mr. Wilson's managers as fraught with peril. Mr. Bryan may tell the truth.

Changed His Mind Again.

Mr. Wilson has changed his mind again. "Mr. Wilson today began detailed plans for his campaign for reelection, particularly with reference to his own part in the next two months of speechmaking." This, according to which comes from Mr. Wilson's summer home, at Long Branch. The President has decided "to avoid personalities as far as possible," the announcement continues. Mr. Wilson probably does appreciate the truth of the old adage, "People who live in glass houses, etc." The dispatch further discloses the fact that Mr. Wilson contemplates making a number of speeches in various parts of the country. It will be remembered that only a short time ago, Chairman McCormick, after a conference with President Wilson, announced that Mr. Wilson did not think it "compatible with the dignity of the Presidency" for a President to go about making campaign speeches. In addition to his speeches, Mr. Wilson has decided to write a series of letters to Democratic leaders in doubtful states, with a view to further setting forth his political views and defending his administrative record.

Lest We Forget.

Mr. Hughes has charged President Wilson with betraying the cause of arbitration in the railway controversy. There is one phase of that affair to which your correspondent's attention has been called and which seems to have been overlooked by a large section of the press. It is that the railroads not only offered to submit their controversy with their employees to arbitration, but that they further offered to segregate, subject to the disposition of the arbitrators, the entire amount of excess wages which they would have earned under the schedule they demanded over the schedule now in operation, so that in the event of a decision granting the demands of the Brotherhoods, or any part of them, the funds would have been ready to pay them on order of the arbitrators and without any further action by the railroads. As the law which Mr. Wilson caused to be enacted makes no difference in the hours the men work, and was not designed to do so, it is difficult to perceive how Mr. Wilson's course in insisting that the roads grant the eight-hour wage basis without either investigation or arbitration can be construed as other than a flat betrayal of the principle of arbitration.

That Mexican Loan.

President Wilson's efforts to induce New York bankers to make a loan of $150,000,000 to Carranza are not meeting with any large measure of success. The bankers point out that Carranza already has a bonded and floating indebtedness of $250,000,000, and that what is more to the point, Carranza has shown himself to be thoroughly unprincipled and therefore is unentitled to credit by any reputable concern. There is one method by which Mr. Wilson may possibly achieve his end. If he will concede Carranza's right to

EVADES SECRET SERVICE OF THREE NATIONS; FOUND IN BALLET!

WINIFRED DE WOLF.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—Miss Winifred De Wolf, missing since April and found in the ranks of Theodore Kosloff's dancers here after a search by secret service forces of three nations, says she will not go back to California with her mother, Mrs. Edgar De Wolf of San Francisco, who has come to get her.

When Miss De Wolf left San Francisco she sailed straight into the "port of missing woman." Mrs. De Wolf appeared to Senator James D. Pheasant of California, for aid.

Acting on the belief the pretty dancer had secured a passport to Russia to which she was not entitled, Pheasant interested the department of justice and the federal secret service. The secret service of Russia and Great Britain were asked to help.

The capitals of Europe were combed for the dancer. Recently a letter from a member of the Imperial Russian ballet, in which the name of Miss De Wolf was casually mentioned, led to the discovery of Miss De Wolf in the ballet.

The guests took along picnic baskets and a sumptuous dinner was served on the lawn surrounding the home of Mr. and Mrs. Billingsley. The guests went to the home of the honorees in automobiles and by street car and very happily surprised Mr. and Mrs. Billingsley who had not been apprised of their coming. The three sons were present with their families as follows: Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Billingsley, daughter, Georgia, and son Frank, of Harter Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Billingsley and daughter, Jean and son Paul, of Fairmont; Mr. and Mrs. F. M. M. Jacobs and daughter, an indemnity of $150,000,000 because of invasion of Mexican territory by Pershing's expedition and commit the United States to its payment, the bankers will certainly consider the feasibility of accepting the Mexican claim as collateral for a large loan, probably not $150,000,000, but a sum of approximating the amount and still leaving some margin to cover interest, cost of collection, etc. If the truth is ever known regarding the Mexican conference at New London, it will constitute another humiliating scandal for which this administration is responsible, but present indications are that the truth will remain known only to a very few. There was no scandal about the A-B-C conference at Niagara Falls, but the humiliating facts have never come out, and probably never will.

Miss Florence, of Fairmont; Max Wilson, of Fairmont; Larnard Ashcraft, of West; Harley Koon, of Manington; Miss Vivian Murray, of Worthington; Miss Irene Selby, of West Milford; Mrs. Nellie Tetrick and sons Dale, Linn and Donald, of Worthington.

Evening Chat

Mrs. W. M. Michaels, of Manington, is the author of the following poem which she read at the G. A. R. Reunion last week:

"The Heroes of Gettysburg"

Go back with me to Gettysburg,
In eighteen sixty-three,
We'll hear the sound of tramping feet,
We'll hear the bugles blow,
We'll see the line of Rebel Gray
March boldly forth in battle 'ray.

Go back with me in memory,
To the days that tried men's souls,
When the fathers of families,
Were forced to leave their folds,
And break asunder every tie
That lies closest to the heart;
Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers,
And sweethearts had to part.

A thrill of admiration runs
Along the Union line,
As that great army, keeping time,
Marched boldly up the hill,
Ah, soon the scene is changed for them
The air grows thick with flying shells
And screams of shot, and cannon's roar,
And dying moans, and din of war,
And those proud ranks of Rebel Gray
Are torn and thinned by the battle's fray;
For thousands gave their lives that day
When the boys in blue met the boys in gray.

From Seminary ridge we see
A charge made by the gray,
And the blue on Little Round Top
Prepare to meet the fray,
And Fickett's men come dashing on
Across the battle plain,
Till the blues from Little Round Top
The shells of death do rain.

Ah, bravely fought the boys in gray;
An onward fast they sped,
Straight up the slope toward Round Top's crest,
O'er thousands of the old stone wall,
Where many brave blue and gray
With saber stroke and bayonet thrust,
Dropped down to lifeless clay.

And hotly waged that awful charge
Across the old stone wall,
The blues and grays with giant strokes
And death surrounding all;
But finally after fierce attack
The Johnnies fled, and then
The straggling band with hasty step
Ran down to Devil's Den.

Then, round about these clefts of rock
The boys in blue did swarm
Until the weary Southerners
Were exhausted, spent and worn;
And General Lee, with staggering band,
Retreated South again,
Completely whipped at Gettysburg,
His loss one hundred thousand men.

Ah, 'twas a hard won victory
For the boys in blue,
But their hearts never failed them
The long days through,
For their cause it was right
And God gave them might,
To carry it through.

Then three rousing cheers for the old boys in blue,
The deeds they have done will live after you—
Aye, will live on forever,
In the freedom they gave
When they lifted the yoke from the poor bonded slave;
When they gave us a country
So grand and so free
A union forever, for you and for me.

Then take off your hats as the old soldiers go by
With faltering step, and fast fading eye,
For the battles they fought, for the victories they won,
Shall keep us forever in union one.

Mrs. Edwin Duffy and children are spending a few weeks in Newark, N. J., with Mr. Duffy who is located there.
